

Who guessed where in the industry sweepstake

All the entrants out there are split into two very divided camps - those led by the fabulously pessimistic Wendy Harris at Sherwood Estate (305,200 tons), who are praying for a year of supply being under our needs, and those like the rose-tinted Jessica Ammundsen at Port Nelson, who think our vineyards should produce every ton they are capable of. The spread of guesses has never been so separated, with almost nobody in the middle zone of 425-450,000 tons. Stand by for the NZ Winegrowers announcement in June, and ponder how you are going to spend the crinkly winnings of a $100 note after Tim's visit in July!
